BCA has been an independent provider of global investment research for over 65 years. Geopolitical analysis is an essential component of a sound investment strategy. Shifts in the global balance of power away from the U.S., growing demands for populist policies in Anglo-Saxon economies, and the 'crisis of expectations' among EM middle classes reinforce the view that geopolitical risk to investment portfolios is not a fad.

Attendees will develop an understanding of how geopolitical risk should be measured, how politics can impact investment returns, and what primary geopolitical and political trends will influence economic growth and market dynamics.

The Change in the Future Trendline Is Real: Implications for Investors in the World of Real Assets

The change: we have all seen it, talked about it, dealt with it a fair amount in the last many months. With the systemic shift in megatrends, real assets' performance has historically been shaped by multiple sectors, subsectors, and geographies. But recently new macro factors have to be considered: Climate change, sustainability, the accelerating shift to a digital technology world. These are the factors which now more than ever are transforming the asset classes which in term comprise "real assets". This event will discuss the new way of thinking and the real asset strategies to explore going forward, giving allocators the information they need when thinking about their real assets portfolio.

Fees

No fee. Registration for this event is complimentary for qualified institutional investor.
